Sport Values

Introduction

Sport Values (SV) is an added opportunity to be active and acquire Physical Education (PE) competences (attitudes, skills and knowledge) while learning how to appreciate the values that characterise sports. There is a growing need in the world today to teach values to students as these will help them develop an ethical and moral compass, develop and sustain relationships, enhance their well being and that of others, and create a foundation for lifetime success. There is no better way to teach about life than through games and so sports are very well positioned to offer the possibility to students to learn the values that will help them navigate successfully throughout life. Many programmes have already been developed at the international scene such as Sport for Peace, Fit for Life, Education Through Sport (EtS) Olympic Values Education Program (OVEP), and True Sport. These programmes considered instilling essential values, and the common elements of such programmes were the following:

- Respect: For others, diversity, rules, and the environment.
- Excellence: Striving for personal and collective best.
- Integrity: Upholding honesty and ethical behaviour.
- Inclusion: Promoting equality and diversity in sports participation.
- Peace and Community Building: Using sports to bridge divides and foster harmony

Such values will form the backbone of the SV programme as the intention is to tap on such programmes and to structure a programme for the local context that considers values as a main theme that is as strong as the subject itself.

Aims of SV

The values instilled through sports are not only crucial for individual development but also serve as a foundation to build stronger, more empathetic, and harmonious communities. By promoting respect, integrity, inclusion, and perseverance, sports transcend their competitive nature to become a vital tool for shaping well-rounded, socially responsible individuals. Integrating these values into sports programs ensures that their benefits extend far beyond the field, fostering a better, more connected world.

An emphasis on a more student-centred pedagogy ensures that the lessons will not be concerned with replicating mindless repetitions of any skill but to equip the students with problem solving skills where together with others they are growing in a holistic way as individuals, within small groups and in teams. SV has the following aims:

1. Personal Development

- Character Building: Sports teach foundational values such as discipline, perseverance, and integrity, essential for personal growth and success in life.
- Resilience and Grit: Facing challenges and setbacks in sports fosters mental toughness and a never-give-up attitude, crucial in overcoming life's adversities.
- Self-Respect and Confidence: By striving for improvement and achieving goals, individuals build a sense of self-worth and belief in their abilities.

2. Social Skills and Community Building

- Teamwork and Collaboration: Sports provide opportunities to work with others toward a shared goal, promoting cooperation and effective communication.
- Respect for Diversity: Interacting with teammates and opponents from varied backgrounds fosters understanding, tolerance, and appreciation of different perspectives.
- Leadership Development: Sports offer platforms for individuals to take on leadership roles, instilling responsibility and the ability to inspire others.

3. Ethical and Moral Foundations

- Fair Play and Integrity: Sports reinforce the importance of honesty, adherence to rules, and ethical behaviour, both on and off the field.
- Empathy and Compassion: Experiencing competition helps athletes understand the emotions of others, whether in victory or defeat, promoting kindness and humility.
- Accountability: Athletes learn to take responsibility for their actions and decisions, reinforcing personal and collective accountability.

4. Contribution to Society

- Inclusion and Equality: Sports serve as a unifying force, breaking down barriers related to gender, ethnicity, and socioeconomic status to foster equity and inclusivity.
- Peacebuilding and Social Cohesion: Programs like Sport for Peace demonstrate how sports can bridge divides, reduce conflict, and promote harmony.
- Health and Well-Being: By promoting an active lifestyle, sports combat physical inactivity and support mental health, contributing to healthier societies.

5. Lifelong Impact

- Transferable Skills: Values learned in sports—like time management, problem-solving, and critical thinking—translate to success in education, work, and personal relationships.
- Commitment to Excellence: The pursuit of excellence in sports instils a growth mindset that carries over to all areas of life.
- Joy and Passion: Sports celebrate effort and enjoyment, inspiring lifelong engagement in physical activity and fostering a positive attitude toward challenges.

SV Characteristics

SV will include a host of different sports and physical activities. These will be in line with those practised in PE LOF, yet they will be different so that students will be exposed to more different activities. Thus, if a school practices handball, then the SV programme could include rugby or hockey because this has not been included in the PE programme, yet it could form part of the PE programme. Activities or sports which are not permitted in the PE programme such as Dodgeball, Prisoners, Tug-of-war ... are similarly not allowed in this programme. While such activities which often find themselves in the hall of shame may be popular with students, they contain some or all the elements listed below:

1. Embarrass or exclude students.
2. Offer limited skill development.
3. Fail to provide sustained physical activity.
4. Pose safety risks.
5. Focus on elimination rather than inclusion.

Consequently, such activities should never be proposed in any PE programme.

SV programme is held during free periods, and this presents a practical solution to address scheduling constraints, and it provides additional opportunities for physical activity. However, careful consideration must be given to ensure the practice is beneficial and aligns with educational objectives. While it is important to encourage the students to be more active, it is suggested that there is a good balance between all programmes and that students might not have more than two physical activity lessons per day. It is also encouraged that this programme is extended to before or after school so that students might have the opportunity to opt in and do not feel compelled to have to participate.

Putting it into Practice

Getting theory into practice is always the most challenging task. Below are some examples of how the students can benefit from such a programme. For a smoother programme, the teaching, learning, activities selected, and values need to be aligned.

1. Consider Success Criteria to be achieved by each student:

- Students need to be able to achieve at least one differentiated criterion of success in each lesson. They need to feel that they are able and that with hard work they can be successful.
- Example: Students will be able to achieve one success criterion from sports or from values or from both sports and values.

2. Use of Collaborative Activities

- Team Sports and Cooperative Games:
 - Promote teamwork, empathy, and tolerance through activities where success depends on collaboration.
 - Example: Organise games where roles rotate to ensure every student experiences different perspectives.
- Conflict Resolution Scenarios:
 - Simulate situations where students must resolve disputes, teaching them fairness and respect in competitive settings.

3. Explicit Teaching of Values

- Class Discussions:
 - Dedicate time to discuss the importance of values in sports and life.
 - Use real-world examples of sportsmanship and ethical dilemmas to encourage critical thinking.
- Modelling Behaviour:
 - Teachers should exemplify values such as fairness and respect during teaching and feedback.

4. Reflective Practices

- Post-Activity Reflection:
 - After activities, ask students to reflect on how they demonstrated values like teamwork, empathy, or fairness.
 - Example Questions:
 - "How did you show respect during the game?"

- "What challenges did you face in cooperating with others?"
- Journals or Peer Feedback:
 - Use peer assessment to reinforce the connection between actions and values.

5. Use of Specific Pedagogical Models

- Use various pedagogical models:
 - Cooperative Learning so that students learn to solve group challenges, serves as an opportunity to learn from others, develop a greater awareness of the self and others and make choices about their process of learning.
 - Use TPSR to integrate learning, transfer learning to community settings and empower the student while consolidating relationships.
 - Inquiry Teaching: use questions to present tasks, develop personal and social meaning of the activities, facilitate student learning.
- Present the challenge to the students:
 - There is no one single way how students can come up with a solution that works for them and for their abilities.

6. Recognition of Positive Behaviours

- Promote Values:
 - Acknowledge and reward behaviours that reflect values, such as fair play or helping a teammate.
 - Example: Include value achievement in the scoring system.

7. Inclusion and Diversity

- Adapted PE Activities:
 - Include students of all abilities by designing inclusive activities, fostering tolerance and respect.
- Culturally Diverse Games:
 - Modify games and or activities to reflect different cultures and backgrounds.

8. Ethical Scenarios and Role-Playing

- Simulated Dilemmas:
 - Pose ethical scenarios (e.g., a teammate cheats—what should you do?) to encourage decision-making and discussions on integrity.

- Role-Playing:
 - Have students act out situations that require empathy, such as understanding an injured teammate's perspective.

9. Curriculum Assessment

- Holistic Assessment:
 - Evaluate physical skills alongside behaviours and attitudes that reflect values.
 - Example: Use rubrics to assess teamwork, leadership, and respect during group activities.

The Sport

The teacher is expected to work on one specific sport for the whole scholastic year such as Rugby, Gymnastics or Dance. It is important that such a sport is chosen upon discussion with the head of department in the college to ensure that there is enough space, equipment and that it compliments the PE programme. A different sport from that experienced in the PE programme is advocated to present yet another sport. The teacher needs to develop a good progression and keep record of the progress in relation to the set targets that were established at the start of the year. The lessons should lead to learning of both the sport and the values.

The Lesson

The lesson should follow a simple format, and it should consider the value as an integral part of the lesson.

The teacher is expected to work on the set of values that are proposed for the specific year group and enough time should be dedicated to that value so that the students are given enough time to accustom themselves and to internalise that specific value. A minimum of one month on each value is however recommended.

The value is introduced at the start of the lesson in a clear and explicit way. A video, a picture, a discussion, role play ... will introduce the value at the start of the lesson to critically challenge or consolidate the students' perceptions of such a value and its interpretation in sport and in life. Differentiated success criteria (SC) that relate to the value are discussed with the students and the activities that ensue have the aim to put such values to the test. It is suggested that there are 2 to 3 activities within the lesson. The teacher needs to challenge the students throughout the lesson by posing questions and such questions are used to help them scaffold on their existing practice.

The lesson should conclude with a reflection. Were the students able to walk the talk and implement such values during play? The students need to
